

Unmistakable Picture Gift Tags

Picture tags are easy to make and even the youngest gift-givers can 'read' them.

What you'll need

- Small-scale photos, 2" square or smaller
- Card-stock paper
- Red and green markers
- Die-cut snowflake stickers
- Hole punch
- String, twine, yarn, or ribbon

What to do

- 1 First, copy digital photos of your family into a standard software document, so that each face measures under 2". Print them at a Fujifilm photo Kiosk or at home on Fujifilm photo paper. Next, cut them out. Also cut 3"x 6" rectangles from card-stock paper (hint: the scrapbooking aisle of the craft store provides plentiful choices). Cut off the corners for a sharp-looking shipping tag shape.
- 2 Family members can then choose the right photos and use glue stick to make a tag for each of their gifts. Most kids can write or copy "To:" and "From:" with red and green markers. Stickers can add a festive flare and reinforce the spot where a hole can be punched.
- 3 Get the kids involved in crafting giftwrap and gift bags. Gardening or package twine makes a natural and inexpensive alternative to fancy ribbon, to tie up a box, and close a gift bag, as well as tie on a gift tag. For a little extra ring, why not string on a jingle bell or two? And remember paper-cut snowflakes? Your kids will need only a little help with folding and snipping, and love the magical moment of unfolding their masterpieces. With tissue paper and child-safe scissors, a youngster will turn out a blizzard-ful. Again, glue stick makes it easy for kids to adhere their best snowflakes to plain bags and boxes.
- 4 Photos and gift bags also combine for inexpensive but wonderful "framed" pictures the kids can make as quick as a wink—even at the last minute. For each, glue a favorite photo to the center of a small gift bag with handles, to use for hanging the picture. Let your child decorate around the photo, using stickers, crayons, markers, paper-cut snowflakes, or anything else. Be sure to tuck a few extra snapshots inside the bag, as a hidden surprise for the recipient to discover. Handmade, from the heart and just like snowflakes, each is one-of-a-kind!
